We are looking for a communication advisor who can strengthen the team in our Brussels office. A new and all-round colleague who is as passionate about strategy and communications as we are.

You know what a stakeholder is and you understand the world around you (or at least a part of it), you are a news-junky and strive to always move forward, above and beyond. Convincing people is part of your DNA, as is the search for valid and convincing arguments. You are self-confident and want to flourish in what you do.

As a communications advisor, you conduct research that supports the development of communication strategies. You assist and supervise work sessions, you prepare stakeholder-mappings, you write press releases and prepare strategic reports.

JOB DESCRIPTION:

- As communications advisor, you contribute to the elaboration of communication strategies.
- You are part of translating these strategies in well-defined communication actions and tools
- You write press releases, information letters, website texts and brochures
- You are responsible for the follow-up and monitoring of communication channels both offline and online
- You also have operational skills and assist with the set-up and execution of public hearings and information sessions

PROFILE:

- You have a master's degree in communication sciences or equivalent
- You already have a first, relevant working experience
- You are a passionate writer
- You have a hands-on mentality
- You are motivated and enthusiastic
- Fluency, both written and oral, in Dutch is essential
- A profound knowledge of French and English is a significant differentiator the middle men.

OFFER:

- You are part of a young and ambitious communications agency
- You follow, take part and act in significant projects
- You work in a multilingual context
- A multi-faced function with personal autonomy
- An internal formation and professional guidance are foreseen
- We create an attractive salary package based on your competence and experiences
